Some of the suggestions that Sarah make towards the Killer Website:

- Navigation font color and size should change when hovering
- Solid color background but each section with a subtle gradient that changes from black to watermelon red
- Unified color scheme of black and red is successful
- Add more images in each section
- More variation with the font of the navigation and the text in each section
- In the album section, have the images of each album juxposed with each other to make a picture wall. After you click an image, more details would show up.
- Link each song to their respective spotify page for website viewers to listen to the music
